Trademark Litigation

A company's trademark, or "brand," often is one of its most valuable properties. Our attorneys have extensive experience in litigating trademark disputes and assisting our clients in protecting their investment in their brands against infringement, dilution and other unfair trade practices.

For example, our lawyers have brought actions on behalf of high-end retailers to remove counterfeit and unauthorized gray market goods from the marketplace and have pursued actions on behalf of an expanding family restaurant chain to clear the field of competitors with confusingly similar names. We also have litigated numerous opposition proceedings before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board to help our clients prevent competitors from registering confusingly similar trademarks or functional product designs that would restrain fair competition.
