Criminal Antitrust Litigation and Investigations

Our lawyers have represented many clients in connection with criminal antitrust matters, both at the grand jury stage and in the courtroom. We have defended both corporations and individuals who are involved in criminal antitrust indictments and investigations throughout the United States. We also have represented foreign nationals from Europe, Asia, and Latin America in connection with criminal investigations. This range of experience is the reason that Vorys is the only law firm in the Midwest to have an attorney serving on the ABA Antitrust Section's International Cartel Task Force.

Some of the significant criminal antitrust matters we have handled include:

- Representing the president of an oil field service company as an individual defendant in a criminal price-fixing case trial and securing an acquittal
- Representing an individual in the grand jury investigation that led to the Archer-Daniels-Midland antitrust prosecution
- Representing clients in numerous grand jury investigations, including recent investigations involving the carbon fiber, polyester staple, automotive paints, oil drilling products, residential window products, veterinary services, and waste hauling industries
