Ms. Morris is a litigation paralegal in the Vorys Columbus office and works primarily with a team of attorneys, paralegals and project assistants in the firm's role as National Discovery Coordination counsel for a large corporate client's asbestos litigation. Her principal job responsibilities include preparation of preliminary responses to discovery requests in various jurisdictions, and compiling and maintaining a central and complete record of all factual information produced to opposing counsel in the asbestos litigation.

Ms. Morris is a member of Vorys' Electronically Stored Information (ESI) core group, and has specific experience in toxic tort litigation, including the development of document databases and the establishment of criteria for collection, review and coding protocols.
