

Insurance

Many of our attorneys focus their practices on representing clients in the insurance industry. We provide legal services to foreign and domestic insurance companies – whether stock, mutual, or fraternal companies, health insuring corporations, or mutual protective associations – and also represent reinsurance companies, captive and reciprocal insurers, risk retention groups, brokers, intermediaries, agents, third-party administrators, compliance managers, corporate risk managers, and insurance trade associations, on a significant range of insurance industry matters.

Our practice for those clients encompasses advice on insurance regulatory issues and preparation of regulatory filings, negotiation, drafting, review, and interpretation of contracts and plan documents, counsel on coverage issues (including director and officer liability insurance), and defense of bad faith, ERISA, coverage dispute, class action, and other forms of litigation. We also represent clients in connection with legislative proposals addressing insurance issues and insurance matters pertaining to corporate, commercial and real estate transactions. Our firm has broad experience in insurance supervision, rehabilitation, and liquidation matters, which is described in more detail in the Insurance practice area section of our website.

Our firm also advises insurance clients on labor and employment issues, real estate transactions, tax concerns, intellectual property, and other non-industry-specific corporate matters.
