

Energy and Utilities

Our lawyers have extensive experience in addressing energy and utilities issues. We represent energy producers, marketers, transporters, end-use customers, and a broad range of other businesses. Our clients include oil and gas exploration and production companies, alternative energy producers (such as wind farms and waste energy generators), distribution and transmission companies (such as natural gas pipelines and energy cooperatives), and large commercial and industrial energy consumers (such as retail stores, auto manufacturers, and residential and commercial developers).

We assist clients in the energy and utilities industry with corporate formation, contract negotiations, financing and transactional work, siting and local zoning issues, environmental and other regulatory permitting and compliance issues, employment matters, proceedings before administrative agencies, governmental relations and lobbying, litigation in federal and state courts, debtor and creditor bankruptcy actions, corporate restructurings, dissolution and intellectual property issues.
