Vorys Health Care Advisors Launches VorysHCAadvisors.com

January 24, 2012

Vorys Health Care Advisors (VHCA), a wholly owned subsidiary of Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease, has launched a new blog that explores some of the most serious challenges facing health care providers, business decision makers, professional associations and other stakeholders in today's complex, rapidly changing state and federal health care landscape.

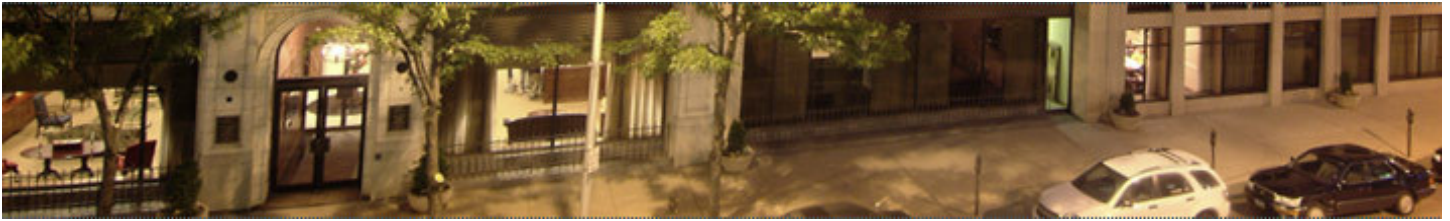

The blog, which can be found at <http://www.vorysHCAadvisors.com>, will examine federal health care reform as it relates to the Affordable Care Act of 2010, changing Medicaid policies and reimbursement issues, managed care practices and other care coordination strategies, the development of model accountable care organizations, children's health issues, quality measurement and much more.

"We are excited about this new means of connecting with others who have a special interest in Medicaid and health care issues," said VHCA President Maureen M. Corcoran. "We'll be focusing on timely issues that reflect the serious job that lies ahead for those who make critical health policy decisions – for families, for institutions and for whole systems."

About VHCA: VHCA helps health care providers, business decision makers, professional associations and other stakeholders deal with the challenges of a complex, rapidly changing state and federal health care environment. The VHCA team has a unique combination of Medicaid and health care, public policy, financial and clinical
