

Jack Chaney

Jack Chaney joined Vorys in 2007 as an associate in the litigation group, after spending six years at a law firm in Washington, D.C. Jack was in trial within a month of joining our firm and has since worked on securities fraud, employment, class action, and data security matters.

Laterals

Although many of our lawyers joined our firm immediately following law school or a judicial clerkship, a significant number of our attorneys took career paths that initially led them to government service or public interest work, regulatory or law enforcement, corporate counsel offices, academia, or other law firms. We believe that such experiences can be important foundations for success in private practice. Given the ongoing growth of our practices and firm, we also welcome exceptional lawyers whose practices and experiences in government service, as corporate counsel, or at other law firms can help us expand our practice strengths and better serve our clients.

Our collegial work environment is particularly receptive to lateral associates, to whom we extend our commitment to mentoring, training, and teamwork.
