

Domain Names

With the rapid growth of the internet, domain names (also known as URLs) have become increasingly important to businesses. Our attorneys are proficient in advising our clients about the many strategic decisions that must be made about which and how many domain names to register, as well as selecting the top level or country level domains – such as .com, .us, and .net – in which registration should occur.

Our attorneys also have experience in helping clients reclaim domain names from cybersquatters, who register domain names that are similar to our clients' trademarks. We offer our clients assistance in targeting, identifying, and exposing cybersquatters, so that our clients' intellectual property is fully protected in cyberspace.

RELATED PRACTICES

- Audits and IP Policies
- Branding, Trademarks, and False Advertising
- International Protection
- Litigation, Enforcement, and Policing
- Technology, Advertising, and Communications

ATTORNEYS

- Cory M. Amron
- Anker M. Bell
- A. Brian Dengler
- Richard S. Donnell
- Gerald P. Ferguson
- Jonathan D. Iten
- William H. Oldach, III
- Christopher M. Ott
- Corinne Marie Pouliquen
- Douglas L. Rogers