

Events

The Best Defense is a Good Offense: How to Manage Litigation in the Workplace

Related Attorneys

Eric W. Richardson

Kent A. Britt

Kimberly J. Schaefer

Related Services

Litigation

5.3.2012

You're invited to join Vorys attorneys Terri Abare, Eric Richardson, Kim Schaefer, Kent Britt, and Jason Hodges as they participate in the upcoming seminar, The Best Defense is a Good Offense: How to Manage Litigation in the Workplace on May 3.

Topics of discussion include:

- Document Issues: We will examine potentially damaging Board room discussions, seemingly innocent email communications and do's and don'ts of preserving documents.
- Strategies for Litigation Prevention: This session will discuss strategies for preventing litigation, including the effective use of whistleblower hotlines and early intervention.
- Attorney-Client Privilege and the Work Product Doctrine in the Corporate Legal Context: In this session, we will explore how the attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine apply and, most importantly, when they don't apply to communications between corporate counsel and their clients.
- Internal Investigations: What do you do when you get that knock on the door from a federal agency? Or receive a subpoena or uncover something as a result of your own risk management activities? Can you protect an internal investigation from disclosure or discovery through the application of the work product doctrine or the attorney-client privilege? We will discuss best practices and recent developments in this area.

To learn more and to register, please email ksallen@vorys.com.